EFFECTIVE: October 1982

POLICY

The College intends to be a good corporate citizen and endorses the notion of using its resources for the betterment of the community. Carrying out its mandate must remain the first priority, but the College also attempts to enhance community benefits through contributions “in kind”. While direct cash transfers are not seen as appropriate use of public funds, (and should only be given with the approval a Vice President or the President), “in kind” contributions can be considered so long as program content is not jeopardized. Promotional materials may also be provided for prizes, etc.
